Why You Need a 2-Week Plan

Most artists upload their video the day it is ready. That is the biggest mistake you can make. The campaign is the release. The video is just the finish line.

BY THE NUMBERS

14 DAYS OF BUILD-UP

2-3 TEASERS IN WEEK 1

3-4 TRAILERS IN WEEK 2

1 BIG RELEASE EVENT

THE 3 PHASES

Days 1-4: Spark Curiosity

Post 2-3 second clips. No song name yet.

Days 5-10: Build the Hype

Post trailers. Announce the song name.
Find your best clip.

Days 11-14: Make It an Event

Countdown, premiere, live stream.

REELS VS. STORIES

Reels reach people who have never heard of you. Stories reach people who already follow you. If you are just starting out, focus on reels first. Stories matter more once you have a following.

Spark Curiosity

Do not show the full song. Post tiny clips to get people asking "what is that?" before you even announce anything.

📺 WHAT TO POST

A teaser is 2 to 3 seconds of the catchiest moment in the song. No title. No date. Just the hook. Always post as a Reel so new people can find it.

Pick the best moment

The biggest hook or most eye-catching visual. Ask: if you had 4 seconds to stop someone from scrolling, what would you show?

Post 2-3 teasers, spaced out

Each one can show a slightly different moment. Do not flood the feed. Space them across Days 1 through 4.

Keep captions short

No dates. No "new music coming." One short emotional line works best. Let people ask questions in the comments.

Reply to every comment

The algorithm rewards early engagement. Fans feel seen when you respond to them personally.

WHY THIS WEEK MATTERS

Every reel teaches the algorithm what you make and who to show it to. By the time the video drops, your audience has already seen your song several times and feels invested.

Build the Hype

Now announce the song properly. Post longer clips, reveal the title, and quietly run a split test to find out which moment your audience loves most.

Trailers are 10 to 15 seconds long. Announce the song name for the first time. Add a simple call to action: "coming soon" or "link in bio to pre-save."

Post 3 to 4 trailers across Days 5 to 10, each from a different part of the video. You are not just building hype. You are running a test to find your best clip.

Trailer A — Announce the song name for the first time

Different clip from your teasers. Short caption with the song title. That is it.

Trailer B — Add a call to action

New clip. Caption says "coming soon, get ready." Drop your pre-save link if it is live.

Trailer C — Start watching your numbers

Third clip. Check views and saves on A and B. Which one is winning?

Trailer D (optional) — Confirm your winner

By now one clip should be clearly ahead. That is what you double down on in release week.

HOW IT WORKS

Clip C gets double the views of A and B. You stop pushing A and B. In release week you make 3 to 4 new versions of Clip C and go all in on what already proved it works. Always follow the data, not your personal favourite.

Make It an Event

Stop promoting the song. Start promoting the moment. People should feel like they will miss something real if they do not show up.

📺 DOUBLE DOWN ON YOUR WINNER

Take your top trailer. Make 3 to 4 new versions of that same clip. Different crop, different lyric overlay, different caption. Post one each on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

🕒 COUNTDOWN POSTS

- ✓ "2 days to go"
- ✓ "Tomorrow it drops"
- ✓ "Less than 24 hours"
- ✓ "It is here" with the premiere link

📅 DO THESE 24-48 HOURS BEFORE

Schedule the YouTube Premiere

Creates a shareable countdown link before the video goes live.

Check Thumbnail, Title, Description

Looks right in preview? No typos? All links in the description working?

Song Live on Spotify and Apple Music

Must be live at least 24 hours before the video. Share the streaming link everywhere from this point on.

Test Every Link on Your Phone

Click every link you plan to share. Test on mobile. One broken link on release day is one too many.

🎧 RELEASE DAY

● 30 min before: Post a story with the premiere countdown link

Casual and real. Let people know it is almost time.

● 10-15 min before: One more story reminder

Final nudge for people who missed the first one.

● Be in the YouTube chat live as it premieres

Greet people by name. It makes it feel personal and encourages others to join.

● Go live after the premiere (30-60 min)

Talk about the inspiration, watch the video together, react in real time, tease future releases. Does not need to be polished. Just show up.

The Full 14-Day Checklist
